$239,000 GOES TO THESE MEN IN A YEAR

SEVEN STARS OF SPORT WORLD WHO ARE WELL PAID

Of the Millions Spent by the Public in the Great National Pastimes Those in Leading Parts Get Thousands.

Here are seven men in the world of sports whose aggregate earnings amount to more than $200,000 a year. They do not represent the financial or business end of sport at that. This vast amount of money, paid out annually to men who earn it by the development of their muscles and brains, is a conclusive proof that all the millions contributed to sport every year do not go into the coffers of the bookmaker, the backer or Without the little jockey who guides a thoroughbred on to victory racing could not exist. Without the ballplayer whose science attracts the crowd baseball as a national pastime would collapse. Without the man who delivers the punch prize-fighting would be no more. These several individuals are the root of sport. Kill them and the plant dies. Every year the man "who delivers the goods" is becoming more familiar with the fact that he is the man behind the gun and in consequence thereof the men who handle the funds must pay him his price.

Jack Watts had a contract with Esquire Abington Beard for 4,000 guineas [$21,000].

Of the baseball managers John Mc-Graw, of New York, probably receives the largest salary. He is said to receive $10,000 a year (the baseball year runs six months) and a stockholder's percentage, which runs his income in the property of the prope

For years Bobby Wallace, of St. Louis, received a salary of $6,500. During the baseball war he got a five-year contract at that figure and made its payment sure by seeing the management deposit the full amount for the five-year term in a bank.

It is difficult to obtain any accurate figures on what men in other branches of sport make, but it can be said without exaggeration that Tommy Burns, the prize-fighter, will have made at the end of this year fully $100,600.

Frank Kramer, the bicycle rider, in the year has made as much as $10,000.

women's open golf championship which begins on the classic links of St. An-handlity. drew's next Tuesday. Five American = women have sent in their entries. The best known on the other side is Miss M. B. Adams, who got into the sixth round of the British event at Cromer three years ago. Miss Adams, like all of the United States players, has drawn a bye in the first round. In the second round she will oppose Miss M. Maitland, of Earl's Ferry. a Scottish international player.

Miss Marjory Pheips, of the Brooklyn Club, has been drawn against Miss Edith Leith, of Cartisle and Silloth, and the American should have little difficulty in winning her match. It is a somewhat curious fact that Miss Maria F. Phelps, a sister to Miss Margery Phelps, has been drawn against Miss Cecific Leith. Thus the two Americans or of the Brooklyn Charles and Silloth, and the Linited States champion of 1900, who is among the entrants, competed in the championship at Cromer, in 1905. On that occasion she was defected in the second round by Mrs. G. Hunter, a prominent Woking player. In the forthcoming tournament. Miss Grischm has been drawn lagainst Mgs. Sumpter, of Hunstanton. This should provide one of the best matches in the second round, but if the American shows her true form it is generally expected that she will win.

The remaining American entrant is Miss Anits Phops, of Springfeld. best known on the other side is Miss
